SUNK IN LAKE CHAMPLAIN.

Small Tugboat Rests in 20 Feet of Wat-

ter, Smokestack Out. Burlington, Sept. 23 .- A small tugboat, somewhat larger than the Mariquita, which is used by the Champlain Transportation company, rests in feet of water at the bottom of Lake Champlain, in Burlington harbor. It has the appearance of a submarine, with a pat of its smokestack and flag pole extending a few feet out of the water.

The boat arrived yesterday morning from Whitehall in charge of Captain Sweeney of the tug Defender. The tug that sunk was fastened between two canal boats by rope guys. It was par-tially disabled and leaking and was being taken from Whitehall to St. John,

In moving about in the harbor the ropes that held the tug to the canalers snapped and the tug promptly filled and sank. No one was aboard. Captain Sweeney skipped across the lake during the day in his tug and arranged to have the sunken vessel raised

It rests nearly in line of the regular steamers though it probably will not interefere with their progress in the harbor unless there should be a stiff wind. The submerged boat may be seen about midway between the breakwaters and the C. T. Co. wharf.
